KDDI and Sumitomo agree to set up Myanmar Telecom Business

KDDI and Sumitomo signed an agreement with Myanma Posts & Telecommunications (MPT) in Naypyidaw on July 16 to jointly provide telecom services in Myanmar. The two companies set up a joint venture company in Singapore called KDDI Summit Global Singapore Pte Ltd, with a subsidiary in Myanmar called KDDI Summit Global Myanmar Co. Ltd. (KSGM).

Myanmar's mobile penetration rate is estimated at only 10% so demand is expected to rise rapidly. Both Japanese companies will use their telecom technology and experience to set up telecom infrastructure to provide world class "Japan quality" mobile and fixed telecom services. They will also focus on customer service through call centers and shops. KSGM's President Mr. Takashi Nagashima said, "We need to fix the various telecom network problems and provide high quality service as fast as possible". The company also plans to enter the high speed internet business using their fixed lines.

The Myanmar government is targeting to raise the mobile penetration rate to 80% by 2016. MPT plans to offer lower voice and internet charges than other telecom providers.

Investment Agreement Seminar on promoting business

The Japanese Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Yangon (JCCY) held the "Japan-Myanmar Investment Agreement Seminar" at the Chatrium Hotel Yangon on July 7 with over 100 member companies participating.

Mr. Nishigori, Assistant Manager for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, South Asia Department, Southeast Asia First Division, came from Japan to discuss the current situation and outlook relating to the Japan-Myanmar Investment Agreement passed by the Diet on July 6 this year.

To support the expansion of Japanese companies into Myanmar, as part of Japan-Myanmar joint initiatives, negotiations were held on the investment environment. Mr. Nishigori said "To support Japanese businesses, the Japanese government is striving to rapidly improve the investment environment."

JFE Engineering completes new Yangon factory

J&M Steel Solutions, the joint venture infrastructure construction company formed last November between JFE Engineering and the Myanmar Ministry of Construction, held the opening ceremony for its newly completed factory constructed in Thaketa district on July 20. The new factory will produce steel structures for bridges and other projects. It just recently shipped its first bridge blocks.

J&M Steel Solutions has received orders from the Ministry of Construction to work on the design, construction, and assembly for the Than Lwin Bridge in the east in Kayah State and the Htee Gyaint Bridge crossing the Irawaddy River in the north in Sagaing Division. Including orders from outside Myanmar, the factory order book has already reached 7,000 tons.

Shin Nippon Air Technologies returns to Myanmar with a branch opening ceremony

On August 1 at the Chatrium Hotel in Yangon, Shin Nippon Air Technologies held its Myanmar branch opening ceremony which was attended by around 100 guests including trading houses, construction firms, and financial institutions.

As a pioneer of the air conditioning business, the company expanded into China in 1973 and then to Asia, the Middle East, and Africa. However, it is now specializing in Asia with local corporations set up in Singapore, China, and Sri Lanka.

In 1995, the company set up a Myanmar branch office to handle the design and construction of air conditioning hygiene & fire extinguishing electrical equipment and general con-strution equipment for Japanese factories, 5 Star hotels like the Chatrium Hotel, and condominiums targeting foreigners. However, due to the impact of economic sanctions, the branch registration was canceled in 2012.

But with Myanmar's economic growth anticipated to continue and major Japanese and global manufacturers and service providers expected to expand in the country, a Myanmar branch office was officially opened again in January 2014 as the local branch of the company's Southeast Asian regional base in Singapore. Operations were started again. The company's Director and CEO Mr. Natsui Hiroshi commented, "We are taking concrete steps to become a key company in the equipment business worldwide"

Forval forms an alliance with Myanmar's first TV Home Shopping Network for Japanese products

To support Japanese companies targeting sales to the Myanmar market, the information telecommunications consultant Forval is teaming up with local company BOOM (Blue Ocean Operating Management), the producers of Myanmar TV's Japan Select Shopping TV, to undertake the general management and marketing of the Home Shopping TV programs.

In Myanmar where communications infrastructure is underdeveloped, the TV and telephone, along with newspapers/magazines, are important media for communicating lifestyle information. This alliance was based on the idea that the Japan Select Shopping TV program enables consumers to buy Japanese products with one phone call, and thus provides an optimal tool for Japanese companies interested in expanding into Myanmar to research the market and consumer tastes.

It is the first time for Japanese companies to be involved in such a program in Myanmar, and the broadcast is expected to start from the middle of August.

Fuji Xerox hosts new product launch event in two cities

Fuji Xerox launched its new copier SC2020 at the Park Royal Hotel in Yangon on July 18 and at the Thingaha Hotel in the capital Naypyidaw on July 22.

In Yangon, there were around 170 guests, mainly from local companies. In Naypyidaw, there were approximately 350 guests, primarily central government officials. The event attracted significant attention and raised expectations for future government procurement orders. With the new product's low cost, high quality, and simple-to-use features, the company plans to expand sales channels into local firms and foreign-invested SMEs.

Through its local sales representative Concordia, the company has been selling multiple products at showrooms and service centers since 2003. Fuji Xerox Asia Pacific Myanmar branch opened in April 2013 with mainly Japanese staff to provide management support for its sales offices and seamless after sales service, along with sales proposals for high value add products such as high speed color.

Cultural News

TOSS Yosakoi Soran Dance

To commemorate 60 years since the establishment of Japan-Myanmar Diplomatic Relations, a "TOSS Yosakoi Soran Dance" was held to introduce Japanese and Myanmar culture at the Yangon National Theater. The sponsor was the Teacher's Organization of Skill Sharing ("TOSS"), a non-profit organization from Japan, with the cooperation of Peace Smile Land Travels & Tours Company and the Myanmar Ministry of Culture Arts High School. There were 28 teachers from Japan who came to Myanmar to perform the Japanese dance "Yosakoi Soran" and play the Japanese Taiko drums, while 45 Myanmar students performed traditional dance and harp for an audience of 1,100 who enjoyed the Japanese and Myanmar culture.

TOSS is represented by former teacher Mr. Yoichi Mukoyama and is a Japanese education research organization advocating education technique (teaching methodology) and conducting information exchanges. Starting in the 1980s as a volunteer organization, it expanded primarily amongst young teachers. Currently, the teachers gather on a voluntary basis to do various volunteer activities. Every year the organization visits one overseas country to conduct international exchanges and school visits, and this year's trip coincided with the Japan-Myanmar 60 year commemoration event. "Yosakoi Soran" is a dance which fuses the traditional Japanese "Yosakoi festival" from Shikoku and Aichi Prefectures with the Hokkaido folk song "Soran". In 1990, university students started the festival with teams of up to 150 players each wearing matching clothes and battling through voice and sound in time with the music. The festival is held every year in June in Hokkaido.

Ma May Nyo of Peace Smile Land Travels & Tours commented "I am very happy that Japan's wonderful culture is being widely introduced to Myanmar people. Using this opportunity, we developed plans to work together on seminars and education related activities." The company also organized a large scale event to introduce Japanese culture for the Japan-Myanmar Diplomatic Relations 50th Year Commemoration, so this was the second time for the event after 10 years.

Myanmar began its transition to democracy three years ago. As it opens up to new foreign investments, Myanmar shows strong potential for retail business. In a previously closed market where supply drove demand, this is not surprising. However, things are already changing, as real shopping promotions are appearing in both modern and traditional stores.

MYANMAR JAPON+Plus' Yutaka Nagasugi meets with Win Win Tint to talk about the challenges of Myanmar's retail industry and future plans of City Mart Holdings...

Win Win Tint is Founder and Managing Director of City Mart Holdings, which operates multiple retail stores in Myanmar, including supermarkets, hypermarkets, bakeries, cafes, pharmacies, baby stores and convenience stores.

Daw Win Win Tint

Nagasugi: Firstly, we are very impressed with the success of City Mart Holdings in Myanmar. Tint, what is the story behind creating City Mart Holdings?

Tint: Thanks. Actually, we started our first retail store at the end of 1996. At that time, there were around three other supermarkets already operating in Yangon. They were Asia Light, MYAING HAY WON and a Singaporean chain store. When our family decided to enter the supermarket business, we realized that supermarkets were unfamiliar for Myanmar people. In the early years, we faced many challenges because supermarket shopping is so new to local people. First, available items are very different from traditional stores. Second, we cannot compete on selling price with small corner shops. So, we faced many difficulties in those early years.

Nagasugi: How did you solve the early problem of price competition with corner shops?

Tint: I thought a lot about how to compete on prices against corner shops. Price is very important for Myanmar consumers. So we worked hard to narrow the price gap with corner shops and also promote other benefits of shopping in a supermarket environment such as hygiene, quality, variety and convenience.

Nagasugi: How did you get your experience to set up and manage a supermarket chain?

Tint: When I first joined our family business as the eldest child, I was very new to this business. During the 1990s, there were many mega stores opening

The Leading retailer in up in our neighboring countries like Singapore, Thailand, and Malaysia. So, I learned about supermarkets by visiting these operations, by reading foreign truth is your success came from your own talents and hard work at home.

Tint: In the retail sector, Japan is a remarkable country with superb service, operation, and efficiency and I have learned a lot from Japan. Every time I visit Japan, I am excited to study as much as I can about the latest technology for the retail sector magazines and articles on retail and by on-the-job learning.

Nagasugi: Did you study any Japanese supermarket chains?

Tint: When we started our other business in 1992, department stores from Japan were very popular in Asia. Big names like ISETAN, TAKASHIMAYA, and JUSCO, which is now AEON. We viewed these as top-level brands in the retail sector.

Nagasugi: Have you ever been to Japan?

Tint: I went to Japan around 2000 for my first trip. Since then, I have been to Japan many times for business and leisure.

Nagasugi: Among Japanese people, it is widely believed that you studied in Japan before and then became a famous businessperson back in Myanmar, but actually, that it is not the real story. The Nagasugi: When you started out, why did you choose supermarkets over other options?

Tint: Actually, you can say it was by coincidence. The decision was influenced by the situation of the country and by family relationships. In 1992, Myanmar started opening its economy and some foreign investors entered the Myanmar market looking for opportunities. Our family business was also looking for new opportunities.

At that time, one of my relatives living in Singapore recommended the supermarket business, which was booming in neighboring countries. But we had no experience in this business. Fortunately, my relative introduced a friend who had retail store experience in Singapore.

We appointed him as a general manager in our debut supermarket business. This Singaporean friend helped us with everything in setting up the new store. But later, he went back to Singapore. In December 1996, the first City Mart outlet opened at Aung San stadium, near the Yangon Central Rail Station.

Nagasugi: So, City Mart has travelled

Mr. Yutaka Nagasugi

a long journey since 1996. Now, how is your business?

Tint: We currently operate 15 City Mart supermarkets, 7 Ocean supercenters, 2 Marketplace, 22 Season Bakeries, 23 City Care stores, 40 City Express 24-hour mini stores, 4 City Baby Clubs, 4 Popular Book Stores, and other retail stores. The supermarket, pharmacy, bakery, and baby store are generally grouped together in the same retail development.

Nagasugi: Are City Mart supermarkets only in Yangon?

Tint: Yes. All 15 stores with this brand name are only in Yangon. We operate retailing in two other cities with different brands.

On the strategy for short term...

Nagasugi: City Mart Holdings currently runs many stores in three cities of Myanmar. What plans do you have for the coming years?

Tint: Our main brand, City Mart supermarket, is aimed at urban shoppers. So, we plan to expand City Mart targeting major city areas. Yangon's population is growing fast, creating traffic problems and reducing time for shopping. City Mart provides fast, convenient one-stop shopping for urban shoppers with higher income levels but with less time to shop. The future strategies of City Mart remain focused on upper and middle class consumers.

For Ocean, as you know, it is a large format retailer for urban households and family shoppers. We designed Ocean to be value oriented as a hypermarket. And we have plans to open new Ocean Supercenter outlets in Myanmar's second-tier cities, including Pyin Oo Lwin, Monywa and Mawlamyine next year.

Nagasugi: Can you let us know the daily shopper entry volume in each outlet?

Tint: Yes, based on our research, the daily entry volume of all City Mart and Marketplace branches is between 70,000 to 80,000 and in Ocean, around 30,000 to 40,000 people per day.

On the future of retail...

Nagasugi: At the moment, world famous malls like AEON are preparing to enter the Myanmar market. What is your suggestion for newcomers to the Myanmar retail market?

Tint: Myanmar foreign investment law came out last year. By this regulation, foreign investors currently can't operate directly in Myanmar retail. But from 2016, they can enter into joint venture opportunities with local partners. From 2021, all foreign players can invest directly in any sector, so I think all businesses have to prepare for future market changes.

Nagasugi: So, when the future market changes, will there be any difficulties for your market share?

Tint: The country is growing quickly and markets will grow bigger, especially the retail sector. So, the market will move to international standards very soon and competition will be tougher than before. But we see this situation in a positive way as changes will create not only challenges but also opportunities. At the moment, we must focus on upgrading our service and efficiency. In the future, an advantage of the changes will be that we can potentially work closer with big partners.

Nagasugi: How about the relationship between Sojitz and City Mart holdings?

Tint: Sojitz is a trading company. We made a Joint Venture with the Sojitz Group to procure consumer goods and foodstuffs. Utilizing advanced distribution and logistics systems and cold chain facilities, CM-Sojitz aims to support higher efficiency and modernization of distribution and logistics businesses. We have plans to expand the cold chain market in the future.

Nagasugi: How do you see the future of City Mart Holdings?

Tint: We have already faced many difficulties over the last 18 years. As you know, every business has challenges which change over time. In the past, our biggest challenges were attracting customers in a weak economy and managing supply chains subject to many merchandising restrictions caused by local rules and regulations. Currently, our main challenges are human resource shortages, rising operational costs and skyrocketing real estate prices. We must overcome these challenges to survive.

On interest in Japanese Products...

Nagasugi: City Mart has drawn considerable interest from Japanese firms looking to enter Myanmar. What do you think about Japanese products for the local market?

Tint: You can get some Japanese products in our stores. While people mostly know City Mart as a retailer, we also have six affiliated companies, some of which import products from abroad directly and some through our distribution company. Regarding quality, products from Japan have no problems. But some have short expiry dates while others are very expensive. So we choose Japanese items carefully. Among Japanese products, our local consumers' favourites are confectionery items and Japanese foods items like sushi, sashimi, Ramen and cooking ingredients.

Nagasugi: For Japanese imports, why do you mainly focus on food products?

Tint: It is very simple – affordability! For example, the stationary products that are made in Japan are very expensive and beyond the price range of many of our local consumers. Another reason is our business is a supermarket, so our focus area is food and drinks. But we also import many Japanese electronic items for our stores through local distributors.

Mr. Yutaka Nagasugi,

CEO of MYANMAR JAPON CO., LTD which operates Myanmar Japon and Myanmar Japon +Plus monthly magazine in Japanese and English languages. He meets with business leaders and innovators in Myanmar and publishes his interviews in these magazines.

Myanmar's First World Heritage Site

Traces of the mysterious Pyu People... Ancient Cities

In June 2014, UNESCO, after a long review process, recognized the Pyu Ancient Cities as a World Heritage Site. They are Myanmar's first World Heritage Site and Myanmar Japon+ plus shares with you how to get there and enjoy the sites.

Even though Myanmar ratified the UNESCO World Heritage Convention in 1994, Bagan failed to qualify and until the Pyu designation, Myanmar was unable to get any sites recognized. The recent designation of Pyu achieves the country's long dream of having a World Heritage site. In the future, many more candidate sites are expected.

*1000 Kyat = approximately 105 Yen (August 2, 2014). Travel times in the articles are by car if not otherwise specified, and depend on road conditions.

Q1 Who are the Pyu?

Pyu is Myanmar's oldest civilization dating from the 2nd century BC to 9th century AD when it thrived as one of Southeast Asia's leading city states. Chinese history books write of impressive groups of Pyu musicians and dancers visiting China.

Q2 What is the cultural significance of the Pyu?

Religious and artistic artifacts such as pots neatly arranged, coins, and figurines of dancers and musicians have been excavated indicating Myanmar had its own distinct culture in the BC era. There are pagodas from the Pyu period believed to be the oldest in Southeast Asia and older than Borobodur.

Q3 Can you see all the sites?

The World Heritage Site designation was for three sites which are all far apart and cannot be toured in 1 day. The most developed tourism site is Thaye Khittaya and there are many Western and Myanmar tours visiting it, but not yet many Japanese tourists.

Foreign visitors are rare

Hanlin Site

Access:

from Mandalay, around 2.5 hours to Shwebo, and then 30 minutes to the site.

It is estimated this City State was established between Beikthano and Thaye Khittaya during the 2nd-9th century AD. The ruins are spread across an undeveloped plain so access is poor. In the Mandalay area, there are already many impressive historic sites and now some tourists are travelling to Hanlin.

The oldest of the three sites

Beikthano Site

Museum at the site entrance exhibits excavated items

Ruins of pagodas and palaces

Access:

from Yangon to Taungdwingyi by bus around 10 hours, then 40 minutes to the site.

The local museum was incomplete for a long time, but was opened in 2013. Those with a deep interest in Archeology will find the museum interesting. Since the designation, busloads of Myanmar visitors have been arriving. Visitors should consider that nearby hotels and restaurants are only local.

Three different styles of pagodas

Thaye Khittaya Site

A relaxing oxcart ride

Combined with the tourist spot of Pyay, this site has the most tourists of the three sites, and the visitors are mainly Westerners. Ruins of temples, palaces, and tombs are spread around the area within a 4km diameter circular wall and it is never boring passing the farmer gardens. While you can visit by car, we recommend the 2 hour oxcart tour. The oxcart tour pick-up spot is in front of the museum by the central part of the wall. In rainy season, the normally small river overflows making for a wild ride. Museum and Site entrance fees are 5000Ks each for foreigners.

Access: From Yangon to Pyay is around 5.5 hours, then 30 minutes to the site. To Taungdwingyi for the Beikthano site is a further 4.5 hours.

Oxcart one 2 hour ride is 6,000Ks (around 6US$). During rainy season, reservation is required. (09-723700888)

Pyay travel advice

Pyay is almost exactly between Yangon and Bagan. During the Bagan Kingdom, it was a strategic location for river traffic, and now it plays an important role as a land transportation hub. The city fits snugly around the roundabout with the statue of General Aung San, and there are several beer gardens along the Irawaddy River bank which are ideal for watching the sunset on a cool evening. At night, along the street on the north side of the Lucky Dragon Hotel, there is a night market. A walk amongst the street stalls is recommended.

Bespectacled big Buddha is popular Shwe Myetman Pagoda

Eye glasses as dedications

Healed by the gentle smile

About 40 minutes by car outside of the Pyay town center, Shwedaung has a bespectacled Buddha statue which attracts many worshippers. It is said that if you pray to this Buddha, your eyes will get better, and in the main hall there are many abandoned glasses which supposedly became no longer necessary. There is an interesting story illustrated in the main hall about how this Buddha came to wear glasses.

One of the 3 Big Pagodas

Shwe San Daw Pagoda

The pagoda's characteristic slenderness

This pagoda is one of three holy sites called the three big pagodas, along with Shwedagon in Yangon and Shwe Maw Daw in Bago. It towers over central Pyay and the view is spectacular. There is an elevator to the top. There are many shops in the area selling specialty snacks. Don't miss the big Buddha in the background.

Overlooking far across the city

New tourist spot

Ahkaukaung

Although a bit far from Pyay and requiring a 2 hour car trip, this new travel spot has become well known by Myanmar people over the past 2-3 years. Riding small boats to view the many Buddha statues carved into the riverside cliff walls is becoming popular. The fishermen living nearby carved these images to pray for a safe voyage.

Where will be the next World Heritage Site? Who is on the interim list?

For the tourism industry, the recently recognized Pyu sites are not yet major tourist spots. If you compare with other World Heritage sites around South-east Asia, the Pyu sites have under developed access and not many hotels and restaurants

But for the seven sites on the current interim list, there are places which the tourism industry is keenly interested in. These sites are expected to continue in Pyu's footsteps to achieve World Heritage site status.

Message from the Editor

Dear Readers,

We are pleased to launch our new English magazine Myanmar Japon + Plus.

Our goal is to provide Myanmar and Japanese business and lifestyle information to an English speaking audience.

Since launching Myanmar's first monthly Japanese magazine, we have faced many challenges and are proud to be launching this sister publication.

We hope Myanmar Japon + Plus becomes your trusted and useful companion in Myanmar.

We look forward to receiving your support and feedback.

読者の皆様

私たちは新しい情報誌として英字版「MYANMAR JAPON+plus」を創刊します。

日本とミャンマーのビジネスや生活情報を、ミャンマー人と外国人に提供することを使命としております。

多くの困難に挑戦した、ミャンマー初の月刊日本語情報誌

「Myanmar Japon」の姉妹誌です。

スタッフ一同、皆様に親しまれる誌面づくりを目指し、足で集めた記事を編集いたします。

「Myanmar Japon」同様にご支援ご鞭撻のほどお願い申し上げます。

Best wishes,
Kyaw Kyaw Thant
